In 1963, the Palau Aguilar, at No. 15 Carrer de Montcada, became the first space to house the Museu Picasso de Barcelona. The original mansion dates from the 13th century and the central courtyard is from the 15th century, with flamboyant Gothic sculptures. Given its striking dimensions, it offers an exceptional setting for standing buffets and small-scale dinners and is an ideal reception area for welcoming guests to events held in other venues at the Museum.
Capacity:

- Standing buffet: 80 people

The Palau Meca dates from the 13th and 14th centuries, in common with the other townhouses that make up the Museu Picasso. In 1981 a renovation project got under way to link the Palau Meca to the Palau Aguilar and the Palau del baró de Castellet. It is an ideal space for receptions, standing buffets and dinners. Thanks to its strategic location and links to the other townhouses, more spaces can easily be added to increase capacity if necessary.

As with the other townhouses that make up the Museu Picasso, the Palau Finestres retains several original 13th-century structures. It was built on top of remains from the late Roman era.

Together they constitute a unique historical and artistic setting for a range of different activities as part of an event, with the option to increase capacity if necessary.
The Museum also has a fully equipped function room with audiovisual equipment and interpreting booths. This open, multipurpose space is ideal for a range of different events, including press conferences, presentations, talks and courses.
